INTRODUCTION

01

The production, processing, sorting, grading, handling, storage and distribution of groundnuts and groundnut products in South Africa is governed by specific statutory food safety requirements aimed at protecting public health and ensuring product integrity throughout the value chain.

All food premises involved in the handling or processing of food intended for human consumption must comply with the General Hygiene Requirements for Food Premises (Regulation R638) and obtain a Certificate of Acceptability (CoA) from the relevant local authority. These regulations establish foundational requirements relating to hygiene, facility design, sanitation, pest control, traceability, record-keeping and operational controls.

Importantly, HACCP (Hazard Analysis and Critical Control Points) certification is not voluntary within the groundnut processing sector. In terms of Regulations R908 and R1060 of 13 November 2009, published under the Foodstuffs, Cosmetics and Disinfectants Act, food businesses that process groundnuts, including shelling, storage, sorting and grading facilities, and peanut butter manufacturers, are legally required to implement and maintain a HACCP system that has been assessed and certified by an accredited body.

This makes HACCP a statutory minimum requirement for these operations, forming the legal baseline for food safety management within the South African groundnut processing sector.

Beyond these statutory requirements, many organisations in the groundnut value chain have implemented additional, internationally recognised food safety management systems to meet formal retail and export market expectations. These include standards such as ISO 22000; FSSC 22000 and other retailer- or market-specific certification requirements applicable to export destinations

Together, these regulatory and voluntary frameworks represent the current benchmarks for food safety, traceability and quality assurance in groundnut processing and manufacturing. Compliance with them not only protects consumers but also strengthens the credibility and competitiveness of South African suppliers in both local and international markets.

This first edition of the Certification Register is published with the following objectives:

To increase transparency and awareness among buyers, regulators and the public regarding the food safety and quality certifications held by participating entities in the South African groundnut industry.

To demonstrate compliance with statutory HACCP obligations and other Department of Health requirements, as well as additional local and international buyer certification expectations.

To encourage broader industry participation, including companies not currently active in formal industry structures such as the SA Groundnut Forum and the SA Groundnut Association, to submit their certification documentation for inclusion in future updates.

The organised structures of the South African groundnut industry, together with their members, reaffirm their firm commitment to:

- Full compliance with applicable food safety legislation
- Continuous improvement of food safety management systems
- Transparency and accountability within the value chain
- Supporting regulatory alignment and responsible industry conduct

This Register is intended as a living document. Through regular updates and expanded participation, it aims to strengthen industry-wide compliance, build buyer confidence, and reinforce South Africa's reputation as a responsible and food-safe groundnut producer and processor.

Adri Botha
Chairperson

IMPORTANT NOTICE & DISCLAIMER

This Certification Register has been compiled based on documentation voluntarily submitted by participating entities in the South African groundnut industry. It therefore does not necessarily include all compliant entities.

While reasonable care has been taken to ensure that the information published is accurate at the time of compilation, neither the SA Groundnut Forum nor the SA Groundnut Association verifies, audits, or warrants the validity, current status, or scope of the certificates provided. The responsibility for maintaining valid, up-to-date certification and regulatory compliance remains solely with the respective certificate holder.

Inclusion in this Register does not constitute endorsement, accreditation, approval, or certification by the SA Groundnut Forum or the SA Groundnut Association. It serves solely as a transparency initiative to promote awareness of food safety and related certifications within the industry. Buyers and other stakeholders are encouraged to request current certificates directly from suppliers where required for contractual or due diligence purposes.

The Register will be updated periodically based on new or revised submissions received.

REPORTING NON-COMPLIANCE

To maintain the integrity and reliability of the groundnut industry, readers are encouraged to report any entities believed to be non-compliant with statutory food safety or certification requirements. Such reports can be submitted confidentially via the SAGA website or by email (see details on the Content page) directly to the Forum or Association. All submissions will be handled with discretion and anonymously, and the information provided will be used solely to promote compliance, transparency, and consumer confidence within the industry.
